

V-ONE SUPPORTS LATEST BEEFY CHALLENGE

V-One Aviation, leading innovators in the air passenger charter market, recently supported Ian Botham's latest challenge to take on teenage cancer and leukemia.

During his nine day challenge Ian walked through two cities each day, starting and finishing at a Marks & Spencer store and covering all Leukemia Research Centres and Teenage Cancer Trust Units and developments.

Ian was transferred between cities by helicopter that was donated for use during the walk. It was this helicopter that V-One branded for this latest challenge. Commenting on the involvement in Ian's latest charity campaign, Rob Moore, Managing Director of V-One said, "We are delighted to be involved in such a worthwhile campaign. Ian really works hard to raise awareness of illnesses that affect young children."
